
IV Grinchenko scientific winter school for graduate students and doctoral candidates

From 18 to 22 February 2019, undergraduates, postgraduates, and doctoral students of specialty 01 "Education/Pedagogy" attended different events in the framework of the IV Grinchenko scientific winter school. Its task is to form the research competence of young scientists, popularize pedagogical knowledge, expand the cognitive field of participants' scientific interests.

For the first time, international scientists were involved in the work of the scientific winter school. In particular, the invited speaker was the deputy director of the Institute of Education Sciences of Jesuit University Ignatianum in Krakow, doctor of Philosophy in Pedagogy, associate professor, Yaroslav Charchula.

The participants of the school, including both young scientists of the University and scientists from different parts of Ukraine, had the opportunity to listen to lectures, attend master classes and workshops of leading specialists in the educational sphere, communicate with invited national and foreign speakers.

According to its content, the program of the winter school included the acquainting students with various scientific institutions: the National Academy of Pedagogical Sciences of Ukraine, Vasyl Sukhomlynsky State Scientific and Pedagogical Library of Ukraine, Viktor Kytasty American library of National "Kyiv-Mohyla Academy" University and Borys Grinchenko Kyiv University.

Coordinator of the winter school: L. L. Khoruzha, doctor of Pedagogical Sciences, professor, head of the Department of Theory and History of Pedagogy of Borys Grinchenko Kyiv University